Marvel's digital-first initiative is designed to offer the best, most popular and most collectible .The role of IL-4 in the induction and maintenance of Th1 and Th2-like responses in the peripheral blood of patients with leprosy. Studies on cytokines in T cells of leprosy lesions support the concept of Th2 predominance in the pathogenesis of the disease. However, studies in peripheral blood T lymphocytes in leprosy are scarce. There is evidence that some cytokines are involved in the maintenance of the immune response to Mycobacterium leprae. Here, we determined the amount of IL-4 and IL-10 cytokines produced by peripheral blood mononuclear cells of patients with active and inactive leprosy, and observed that blood mononuclear cells from lepromatous patients produced higher amounts of IL-4 than non-lepromatous patients, and the IL-4 concentration was correlated with the degree of infection. We also assessed the capacity of mononuclear cells from lepromatous and non-lepromatous patients to secrete IFN-gamma and IL-4 using stimulating antigens prepared from M. leprae. The addition of anti-IL-4 mAb increased the IFN-gamma secretion in PBMC cultures stimulated with PGL-ESAT-6, a preparation of M. leprae 70 KDa antigen. The proportion of IFN-gamma+ lymphocytes was increased in the absence of IL-4, but the frequency of PBMC from non-lepromatous patients secreting IL-4 was also increased. These findings showed a relationship between IL-4 and IFN
